AKA THE MALT HOUSE

BETWEEN 125TH & 128TH STREETS | WEST HARLEM

Positioned in the heart of West Harlem's Factory District, The Malt House at 461 West 126th Street sits within one of Upper Manhattan's most active areas of creative, commercial, and residential growth. As part of the 1.5 million-square-foot master-planned Factory District, the property combines historic industrial character with modern infrastructure and exceptional flexibility for a wide range of users. Surrounded by Columbia University, emerging life science and innovation hubs, new residential development, and a growing mix of dining, retail, and cultural destinations, The Malt House offers a distinctive opportunity to establish a meaningful presence in one of Manhattan's most dynamic and increasingly connected neighborhoods.

461 WEST 126TH STREET

BETWEEN 125TH & 128TH STREETS | WEST HARLEM

The Factory District has emerged as one of Upper Manhattan's most compelling mixed-use destinations, driven by significant investment in innovation, education, life sciences, creative industries, and residential growth. Surrounding The Mink Building, the area is increasingly shaped by Columbia University's expanding Manhattanville campus, major institutional anchors, adaptive-reuse projects, and a growing mix of dining, retail, and cultural destinations. With the 1.5 million-square-foot Factory District helping transform the surrounding streetscape, this once heavily industrial section of West Harlem is evolving into a dynamic live-work-create environment, positioning The Mink Building at the center of one of Manhattan's most active emerging commercial districts.
